SC "GIVE KIDS A SMILE" BEGINS ENROLLMENT FOR 2008

by Phil Smith

The SCDA is ramping up to stage the sixth annual Give Kids A Smile Day on Friday, February 1, 2008. The plans for the next event are not completely finalized, but one thing is certain, we need volunteers and expanded care facilities. And in order to establish our programs, we need commitments immediately.

Last year's GKAS Day was the biggest event of the series. Volunteers in over 14 sites, as well as private office settings provided free dental care to 934 children and generated dentistry that exceeded $230,000. This financial total is based upon current Medicaid reimbursement rates, not average fees in private practice.

In February 2007, the organizers of GKAS changed formats for delivery of care in some of the metropolitan areas. Screenings and cleanings were accomplished prior to the launch date of the GKAS event. Some of the volunteers in clinic settings accomplished exams that allowed for referrals to private office settings. In Columbia for example, there were eight offices that received scheduled patients on the GKAS Friday. Actual appointments were made during the examination process and a master receipt directed the child for restorative care.

Next year, we hope to expand the communities which we serve. Last year Newberry opened for the first time under the direction of Dr. Erwin Baker. The response was excellent! This year, the GKAS Committee would like to encourage other smaller communities to reach out to provide necessary treatment.

Drs. Dana Parker and Phil Smith will co-chair the 2008 GKAS event. Robin Van Put, a dental assistant in Lexington, will again serve as site chair for the state. Dr. Parker has recently returned from an ADA forum regarding the GKAS Program. "I am so excited about "Give Kids A Smile" and look forward to developing some of the new ideas that other states have incorporated", Dr. Parker said. "Many states use a different reference for the cost basis of care. Usual and Customary Insurance fees for the zip code produces a more realistic charitable yardstick. One state has developed a superbill that each patient receives upon completion of their care. This receipt denotes the value of the free dentistry delivered."

Many of you realize the importance of this program. Please enroll now. Commit your time and skill for one Friday. Consider hosting the kids in your office if you prefer. The technical colleges will also offer support in the form of screenings, prophys, or clinical space. You may register online at www.scda.org. Just click on the "Give Kids A Smile" icon under the "Announcements".

Goodbye to Two of Dentistry's Friends

Two friends of South Carolina's dental community have passed away. Frank Walker died September 10 and Fred Caldwell passed away October 10; both in Columbia. Their connection to and concern for all things dental sealed their place in our hearts.

I first met Frank Walker while I was in dental school, as I suppose he probably met every dental student at MUSC. Frank worked for Thompson Dental Company at the time and by his nature he was one of the friendliest guys I ever met. But beyond being friendly, Frank was quick to offer guidance, opinion, and counsel as needed. You know, he had a way of wrapping every tidbit of merit into some kind of story or personal experience. By the time the conversation was over, you had resolved your concern. Although he was not a dentist, he was one of my mentors.

Upon my graduation, Frank helped me decide about my future location and a practical expectation for partnership. He drove me all over Lexington County, talking about traffic flow, population growth, and how great it would be when I got established. He was right! As the years passed, my circumstance changed, and Frank moved on to his own business in office filing and paperwork. He still had that excitement about dentistry. It was infectious.

Eventually I saw Frank less and less. I usually ran into him at the SCDA Annual Convention and there was that immediate reconnect. I do not doubt that most dentists from that decade have had a similar experience with Frank Walker. I believe that organized dentistry has lost a good friend.

It was with regretful surprise that I also learned of the death of Fred Caldwell, another long runner and Thompson Dental Alumni. Mr. Caldwell had a deft eye and was a creative guide for most dental offices built in the Palmetto State in the last three decades.

I recall when the tornado that devastated Lexington in 1994 crashed my office. I moved my practice during the rebuild. Fred Caldwell and Teri Hayes were two of the first on the scene. Amazingly, Fred showed up with a roll of plans from the original Caldwell design of 1979 and within a week I had blueprints and suggestions that allowed my quick recovery. @hether it was a retrofit for a panorex or a complete office expansion, Fred Caldwell contributed to the construction of many dental buildings. He was well known to be able to solve unique problems, be they plumbing or space related. What a service was offered!

Both of these men were dedicated supporters of dentistry. Their contributions have been as monumental to individual practice as any significant development in South Carolina dentistry. On behalf of the dental community, I offer condolences to the families of Frank Walker and Fred Caldwell.

In the Nick of Time!

I received an interesting letter the other day from Karen Fuller, a hygienist in York. It was about an event that came unexpectedly. Here is her story:

“Monday, September 17 started as any normal Monday. I went to work at York Dental Associates, where I have been a hygienist for the last eight years. After work on Mondays, I am a personal trainer at our local YMCA. As I was teaching a new member how to use some equipment, I heard Marilyn, our front desk person, call to me, “Karen is that man OK?” I turned around and saw a 52 year old man face down on the floor, gasping for breath. I ran to him and asked if he was all right. I got no response!

“Marilyn, call 911”, I said. She had already begun to dial the emergency number. The next four minutes seemed like they lasted for an eternity. As soon as she dialed, the man took his last breath, and his eyes rolled back. He was gone. Someone helped me roll him over on to his back. There was no breath or pulse. Marilyn gave me the resuscitation mask, and I called for the AED that the YMCA has on site.

I did two rescue breathes and a nurse from one of the aerobic classes joined me. Together we removed the man’s shirt and attached the AED paddles. We continued CPR as instructed by the device for another minute as the AED reassessed the patient and told us to administer the first shock. After the first shock, the victim gasped for air but was still unresponsive. CPR was continued for another two minutes. In those two minutes, I remember people standing back watching in somberness and shock. I recall a lady touching his leg and praying, as well as someone standing behind me and praying for me.

We were about ready to administer the second cardiac shock, EMS arrived. They took over, and by the time they administered the third shock, our patient had recovered a strong pulse. There were many hugs and tears at that moment from the patrons of the YMCA gym.

I don’t know how we remained so calm and were able to recall what to do so quickly (that is what I have been asked the most). I am thankful that when I needed to use my training, I was able to act decisively. In the fourteen years that I have been CPR certified, I never expected to use it. I am not sure that any of us do. That evening the doctor from the emergency room called us at the YMCA to congratulate us on a job well done. Without our precise and quick response the man would have surely died.”

Karen, your story is amazing, and will make many readers appreciate the benefits of our own CPR training. You know, the person on the floor is too often the doctor. So staff and family should all contact their local Red Cross in order to protect those in our care. Congratulations on your commitment to caring for our community!

Till Next Time,
Phil

President's Message

Dr. Carter Brown
President

Make some lemonade. That is always the advice when you have been given lemons. Two weeks ago the profession of dentistry was dealt a bunch of lemons. A cover story in the New York Times made a frontal assault of the very core of dentistry and dentists. In the article "Boom Times for Dentists but not for Teeth", the Times paints a picture of dentists only being interested in making money, working shorter hours, and keeping the number of dentists being trained limited.

Dentistry has long been the fertile source for abuse and comic attack of uncreative entertainers and ad agencies. The community in general has been programmed to see dentistry as painful and expensive and basically something to be ignored. Instead of the media helping to get the message out about getting care early and what the individual can do to avoid problems, they choose to belittle the best example of "Health Care That Works" in this country. Dental offices today are focused on patient comfort and care. The attention to detail for sterilization and infection control exceeds most medical offices according to one study. Most treatment can be done in a very comfortable manner and dental care is the best value in health care.

The Times said, "With ... more than 100 million people lacking dental insurance, the percentage of Americans with untreated cavities began rising this decade." Is the Times asking the insurance companies to give free insurance to those who do not have access to insurance? Where is the article on insurance profits?

"Instead of the media helping to get the message out about getting care early and what the individual can do to avoid problems, they choose to belittle the best example of "Health Care That Works" in this country."

The Times does not blame the epidemic of obesity and chronic diseases on physicians. They do, however, blame the level of decay on dentists because, according to the Times, dentists "do not accept Medicaid" and dentists are "working shorter hours even as the number of dentists, per person, has declined".

However, the data shows that when the Medicaid reimbursement reaches the 75th percentile, dentists sign up for the program. Data also shows that below that level, the dentists actually lose money. Who would sign up to lose money? I did not see anything about teens drinking soft drinks non stop, lack of home care, and the elimination in many areas of dental health as part of basic primary school curriculum. I did not see the statistic that more than $1.6 billion in free dental care was done last year by dentists in the United States.

As for the number of hours worked, the Times say that dentists make what non-specialist physicians make but work far fewer hours. However, the Bureau of Labor Statistics states: "Most dentists work 4 or 5 days a week. Some work evenings and weekends to meet their patients' needs. Most full-time dentists work between 35 and 40 hours a week." " The average person in America works 33 hours a week." The New York Times did not cite any sources for most of their article. It is not surprising that their data is wrong.

The Times then reports in horror that dentists make more than doctors do. The last time I checked, Dentists were Doctors. Again however, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that every physician, specialist and non specialist make more than dentists and the average income the Times inaccurately reported for dentists is 33 percent higher than the actual number from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The Times also presented the concept of dental therapists who are technicians who can prepare and restore teeth, plus extractions. The Times quote is that: "Studies of the work by therapists have concluded that it is comparable to, and in some cases better than, that of fully trained Dentists". A friend of mine is a Dentist who works on the North Slope area of Alaska and oversees therapists. His comment was that they don't do anything without his signing off on it and if it is the least bit beyond the simplest of procedures, they transfer the patient to a dentist for care.

The attraction to therapists is they are trained quickly and work for less than dentists. The question is, do you want the underserved population, which is usually the most medically compromised, to be receiving anything but the best care available? It is not as simple as drilling a hole and filling it.

The American Dental Hygiene Association also weighed in on the NY Times article indicating they want to become the primary non-traditional therapist saying: "projections provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics ...indicate that we are facing a critical shortage of dentists in this nation while the dental hygiene profession continues to grow." What the Bureau actually said was, "Employment of dentists is projected to grow about as fast as average for all occupations through 2014. Although employment growth will provide some job opportunities, most jobs will result from the need to replace the large number of dentists expected to retire. Job prospects should be good as new dentists take over established practices or start their own." The Bureau then says, "employment of dentists is not expected to grow as rapidly as the demand for dental services. As their practices expand, dentists are likely to hire more dental hygienists and dental assistants to handle routine services." The expanded use of auxiliaries in private dental offices will be the future trend to meet increased demand for dental services. Two more interesting statements from the Bureau of Labor Statistics were: "More than half of all dental hygienists worked part time—less than 35 hours a week" and "Older dentists, who have been less likely to employ dental hygienists, are leaving the occupation and will be replaced by recent graduates, who are more likely to employ one or even two hygienists. In addition, as dentists' workloads increase, they are expected to hire more hygienists to perform preventive dental care, such as cleaning, so that they may devote their own time to more profitable procedures." There you have it, a blueprint from the Bureau of Labor Statistics to help access to care by increasing the use of auxiliaries in dental offices.

The ADA and AGD, as well as other dental organizations, wrote strong responses to the New York Times. We will see if the Times will print any of these.

As for the lemonade, this event will open the door for Dentistry to finally stand up to the detractors and allow the truth of this caring Health Profession to be told. I believe that we must all take this opportunity to focus the spotlight on the truth about Dentistry. The SCDA will be working in new areas and with new methods this year to begin this task. As you can see, there is much work to be done, and the days of sitting back and letting someone else carry the water are over. We need every member of the SCDA to play a part in this long over due effort. We will be asking everyone directly to help.

ACD Welcomes South Carolina Members

The American College of Dentists inducted nine dentists into the College during ceremonies in San Francisco. The September 27 convocation was held as part of the American Dental Association's Annual Session activities. New members from across the state are (L to R) Drs. Thomas Edmonds, Robert Gordon, Monica Cayouette, Rocky Napier, Gloria Pipkin, Marc Levitan, Charles Maxwell and Ben Adams. Dr. Joseph Carlisle is not pictured.

The American College of Dentists is a national dental society that focuses its efforts on ethics in the dental profession. Founded in 1920, the ACD's charitable activities include seminars in dental schools and scholarships within the dental student body. The mission of the College is to promote the public's understanding and appreciation of quality oral health service.

Executive Director's Notes

There has been a lot going on with the SCDA the last few months and I want to use this edition to update everyone on the latest:

Medicaid

You may be still asking questions regarding the mailings you have seen from First Continental Insurance Company. This was brought to my attention early last week and immediately your SCDA got involved. Bottom line was that First Continental acted without permission and mailed several letters that were inaccurate. In case you did not see the SCDA Action Alert, the SCDA worked with the Department of Health and Human Services and wants to inform you that the material you received was totally inaccurate and you should discard the information immediately. A follow up letter from DHHS should come soon regarding this subject.

Mr. Phil Latham
Executive Director

While on the subject of Medicaid, at our recent Medicaid Task Force meeting, it was reported that close to 600 dentists have not reported their National Provider Identification (NPI) number to Medicaid. This reporting is required so I urge you to take this action as soon as possible. Medicaid has also planned to hold additional workshops before the year ends on filling out the new ADA claim form. Again, I strongly urge you to be on the lookout for these dates and consider sending your office personnel to the workshops. The SCDA will also be posting this information on its website and reporting it via email.

NHII

Not long ago we had to get use to a new acronym: NPI. Well, it is time to become familiar with yet another one: NHII, or The National Health Information Infrastructure. This is an initiative set forth to improve the effectiveness, efficiency and overall quality of health care in the United States. The primary goals of NHII will be to improve patient safety, improve healthcare quality, and better understand health care consumers along with many other things.

What does this mean for you as a dentist? The jury is still out and this will probably not begin to take effect until 2010 or later, but I encourage you to stay alert and be aware of it coming in the future. You can go to any search engine on the internet, type in NHII and read more about it; one website to check out is <http://aspe.hhs.gov/sp/nhii/FAQ.html>.

2008 Annual Meeting

If you haven't already, mark your calendar for the 139th Annual SCDA Convention being held at the Myrtle Beach Sheraton and Convention Center, April 23 – 27, 2008. You can view additional details and make your hotel reservations on the SCDA website, www.scda.org.

SCDA House of Delegates

Please note that the SCDA House of Delegates meeting will be held on Friday, December 7th beginning at 11 a.m. Registration will begin at 10 a.m. The meeting this year will be held at Virginia Wingard Memorial Church here in Columbia. Make plans to be there to learn more about your Association.

Happy Thanksgiving

I want to wish each of you and your families a Happy Thanksgiving. The SCDA office will be closed Thursday, November 22 and Friday, November 23 in observance of the holiday.

OFFICE SUPPLIES DELIVERED TO YOUR DOOR

Why are you continuing to waste your time running around to different stores to purchase your office supplies when you can have them delivered to your practice at no extra charge? Besides saving you and your staff time, this will also help save you at the gas pump.

Your Association negotiated a deal for you as a member to receive this benefit along with discounted savings on thousands of office supply products through Staples Business Advantage.

You can receive free, next day delivery for all orders over $50 by contacting Heather Davis with Staples at 1-866-732-5311 ext. 232 and requesting a catalog containing thousands of discounted office supply products. These discounts range anywhere from 5% - 50%!

We here at the SCDA office use this benefit often. We simply keep a tally of any and all items that we will soon need to replenish and once we reach the $50 amount, we place the order and the products are in our office the very next day!

You have the flexibility to order via phone, fax, or internet. It's your choice. Staples also offers online competitive pricing, delivery information, online hassle free returns, and experienced/centralized representation.

While you are thinking about it go ahead and give Heather a call and ask her to send you an office supply catalog to keep in your practice. Thanks to this benefit it doesn't get much easier or cheaper for your practice to keep up with its office supply needs.
